Keynote Speaker

Justice B.N. Srikrishna

Justice B.N. Srikrishna, a retired former judge of the Supreme Court, is India's go-to jurist for critical "rule of law" issues. Known to quote Shakespeare and Sanskrit scriptures with equal felicity, his most recent assignment was chairing the committee formed to draft a data protection regime for India. Member/Client Panel Discussions

1

Trade Wars and Increasing Threats to a Rules-Based Globalised Order

It's no secret: global trade is in a tailspin. No matter your home country or where your clients fall on the trade divide, we all now live in a world in which steady diplomacy is taking a back seat to escalating threats and a willingness to erect barriers before creating rapport. In an era of uncertainty, how can you help your clients protect their interests, grow their companies and enter markets beyond their own borders? We will explore the challenges of doing business across jurisdictions and identify signs of hope – and opportunity – in the face of today's trade wars.

Data Protection Laws: A Comparative View Across Key Jurisdictions

Although the EU's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) created tremendous media, business and legal waves when it took full effect in May 2018, it is but one of hundreds of privacy laws in effect worldwide. For domestic and global businesses alike—and their legal-services providers—ensuring compliance with these myriad laws can become a major, costly challenge. We will provide an overview of some of the most important and influential data protection, privacy and information security laws around the world and offer tips on how businesses can and should respond to these various regimes.

Evolving Role of External and Internal Counsel in the AI-Powered Age

Artificial intelligence (AI) is permeating every aspect of our lives. From the most common, handheld devices to social media platforms and sophisticated securities trading platforms, the influence of AI seems virtually inescapable. For better or worse, AI has also reached the legal industry. We will review these new technologies, explore what they mean for lawyers and their clients, and discuss strategies for making virtual—or not so virtual—friends with human and non-human decisionmakers.

Managing Disputes Across Several Jurisdictions— Practical Tips

By their very nature, business disputes are complex and contradictory. When commercial, regulatory or law-enforcement conflicts involve two, three or more jurisdictions, however, the challenges grow exponentially. Using real-world examples, our panelists will discuss the issues you and your clients are likely to face when pursuing litigation in multiple countries, and offer practical solutions to help streamline the process, achieve the results you seek, and even prevent cross-border disputes arising in the first place.
